Madison's reasons for S'eastern pullout clarified

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

The decision by Madison Consolidated Schools to withdraw from the Southeastern Career Center has less to do with the tuition the facility charges and more to do with the overall pay structure and the fact that only 22 Madison students used the center last school year.

Jeff Studebaker, superintendent of Madison Consolidated Schools, has said the overall costs to Madison — $221,311.90 to serve those 22 students — make participation fiscally irresponsible for the corporation.

Derek Marshall, director at the Southeastern Career Center, said this week that the actual tuition assessed by the career center for all students is $2,617.70 per year per student and not the $10,000 a year that some people have cited on social media by apparently dividing Madison's overall costs with its number of served students.

Studebaker agreed that there has been some misinformation on social media. He said while the cost per student to Madison is still about $10,000 per year — excluding Madison's transportation expenses to and from Versailles —only a portion of that is actual tuition.

"He's absolutely correct about his tuition number that was put out there. However, the total bill for Madison Consolidated Schools last year was $221,000 to the career center and that works out to $10,000 or $11,000 per kid. That $10,000 or $11,000 tuition per kid was not our number. We did not ever say that. We put out that it was over $200,000 and someone else out there in the Facebook stratosphere wanted to start talking about that as per kid cost as tuition."

Studebaker noted that as a member of the center, Madison also pays into the facility based on factors like assessed valuation, an amount that ends up making Madison's share higher than some of the other 11 schools who send far more students to the program.

"Our assessed valuation is how we determine that rate," Studebaker said. "We're paying 15 percent of the total operating costs of the career center even though we're the smallest enrollment in this career center."

Marshall noted that all 12 members pay a base membership fee of

Madison man arrested on child solicitation charges

Courier staff report

A Madison man is in the Switzerland County Jail after being arrested Tuesday on charges that he solicited a child and shared matter deemed harmful to a minor.

Jack D. Shelley, 48, of Madison, is being held on a $500 cash bond in the Switzerland County Jail after he was charged in connection with a computer crimes operation conducted by the Switzerland County Sheriff's Office and other agencies.

Shelley is charged with two counts of Child Solicitation, both Level 5 felonies, and two counts of Dissemination of Matter Harmful to a Minor, both Level 6 felonies, in connection with an ongoing investigation to identify computer crimes involving minors.

Sheriff Brian L. Morton said Shelley solicited an encounter with an officer posing online as a young teenager including sharing harmful correspondence. The two counts stem from contact with officers posing as two different teenagers.

Morton said his department, like a lot others, conducts ongoing operations to identify suspects seeking to contact underage individuals through social media for illegal purposes and Shelley's arrest was part of that operation.

Shelley was arrested Tuesday by the Switzerland County Sheriff's Office in Madison after local police helped identify his location and was arraigned Wednesday in Switzerland County Circuit Court.

The Switzerland County Sheriff's Office, Indiana State Police and Vevay Police Department assisted in the case.

Motorcycle crash injures Bedford man

Courier staff report

A Trimble County man was injured when he crashed his motorcycle Friday morning on U.S. 421 in Bedford, Kentucky.

Ted N. "Teddy" Callis, 68, of 54 Center Court Drive, Bedford, was traveling south in U.S. 421 at about 9:30 a.m. when his bike went off the edge of the roadway, struck a culvert head and flipped Callis off the vehicle. The single-vehicle crash took place between Fairground Road and Smith Drive.

According to Trimble County Deputy Sheriff Lonnie Gullion, Callis sustained possible head and internal injuries but was alert and conscious at the scene. He said Trimble County EMS responded and took Callis to University of Louisville Hospital.

"They wanted to fly him to Louisville as a precaution but all three of the helicopters were tied up on calls so they had to drive him instead," Gullion said.

Callis was being evaluated in the hospital emergency room early Friday afternoon.

Bridge inspection will be next week

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet has advised motorists of inspection activities next week on the Milton-Madison Bridge, which carries US 421 across the Ohio River between Milton and Madison, Consultant crews will be performing the biennial bridge inspection June 24-28.

Lane closures and impacts to traffic are not expected, the announcement said, as inspectors will be accessing the bridge from the ground and from the shoulder of the roadway. Some shoulder closures may be necessary. Inspection hours are currently scheduled daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The date and duration of this work may be adjusted if inclement weather or unforeseen delays occur.

Indy father acquitted in starvation death of 2-month-old

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — A man has been acquitted in the 2017 starvation death of his 2-month-old daughter. WRTV-TV reported a jury returned the verdict late Wednesday in the case against William Moss after two days of testimony in Marion County Criminal Court. Moss and the baby's mother, Janet Ringer, were charged last year with neglect of a dependent resulting in death. Ringer was sentenced in April to seven years in prison after pleading guilty to one count of neglect. The Indiana Department of Child Services faced scrutiny after the child's death, which occurred hours after four child welfare workers visited the infant's home. At least one of the workers expressed concern about the child's well-being but didn't report it to authorities. Coroners determined the baby died August 21, 2017, from malnutrition and dehydration.

Man steals from home, returns asking to rent it

ANDERSON — Authorities say a homeless man stole handguns, tools, cash and jewelry from a home and then returned to ask the owner about renting the property. The Herald Bulletin reported Aaron L. Hendrickson was charged this week with burglary and theft. Police say an Anderson homeowner reported an estimated $6,500 in thefts May 28. Witnesses told police they saw a gray van leaving the driveway at 6 a.m. the same day the property was reported stolen, and three people apparently in the same van inquired about renting the home. Police found the van and some stolen items inside. They located Hendrickson in Daleville last week and they say he acknowledged being involved in the thefts.

Boy riding dirt bike dies after hit by SUV

GOSHEN — A 12-year-old boy has died after being struck by an SUV while riding a dirt bike. Goshen police say Malachi Southern was riding the evening of June 10 when he apparently went past a stop sign and into an intersection, where he was struck. The Goshen boy was taken to a hospital in critical condition and his obituary said he died Monday. Malachi was to be a seventh-grader at Goshen Middle School. A post on the school's Facebook page says he was "a bright, funny boy who was well-liked by his classmates."

Manslaughter acquittal in road rage attack

FORT WAYNE — A jury has acquitted a man of involuntary manslaughter but convicted him of battery for beating another man who subsequently died of a heart attack during a road rage attack. The jury in Fort Wayne deliberated about five hours Thursday before returning the split verdict in the trial of Brandon Cook, 28. He could receive up to a year in prison when he is sentenced next week. Cook was charged in the death of Orlando Fernandez, 60, last August. The two men had an altercation along U.S. 30 in Fort Wayne. An autopsy determined Fernandez died of a heart attack triggered by the stress of the altercation. One doctor testified about Fernandez's severely diseased heart and said extreme anger could have caused the heart attack.

Toddler dies after pulled from pool

AVON — Authorities say a toddler has died after being pulled from a swimming pool. Hendricks County Sheriff's Office Capt. Amanda Goings told The Indianapolis Star that the child was pulled from the pool Monday and died a day later at a hospital in Indianapolis. The newspaper said the child was in the care of a relative at the time he ended up in the pool. The Marion County Coroner's Office identified the child as 22-month-old Wyatt Bush.

Bodies found after mortician's suicide

TIPTON — Police are investigating whether a funeral director didn't bury at least four bodies within a reasonable time as required by state law. State police say an inspection this month of Porter Funeral Home in Tipton by an examiner from the Indiana Professional Licensing Agency Board found four bodies in a non-refrigerated area, 11 death certificates hadn't been issued and the license of the funeral director, Kevin Porter, 62, was expired. A call by The Associated Press to the funeral home was answered by Tipton County Coroner Brad Nichols. He said Porter, who also owned the funeral home, killed himself Thursday. Police had searched the now-closed funeral home Thursday and four bodies found inside were turned over to the coroner's office, which has been in touch with affected families.

Mill cited for excessive lead, cadmium dust

EAST CHICAGO — State safety officials have ordered a steel mill to lessen employee contact with hazardous substances after finding some workers were exposed to lead and cadmium. Indiana's Occupational Safety and Health Administration issued the order to the ArcelorMittal Indiana Harbor steel mill in East Chicago, saying a worker was exposed to lead dust at 20 times the permissible exposure limit and cadmium dust at 14 times the limit for eight hours. The mill is being fined $10,000 for the violations. ArcelorMittal spokeswoman Mary Beth Holdford told The (Northwest Indiana) Times that the company has "robust programs" to comply with safety standards and is working with the Indiana agency to resolve the issues.

Disputed South Bend abortion clinic to open

SOUTH BEND — A group says it plans to begin accepting patients at an abortion clinic next week. The South Bend Tribune reported that Amy Hagstrom Miller, of the Whole Women's Health Alliance, said employees began answering phones Wednesday and booking appointments for next week. A federal judge granted an injunction May 31 allowing the Texas-based nonprofit to open the clinic without a state-required license, pending a final ruling in a federal lawsuit that's set to go to trial next year. State officials have said the alliance hasn't provided requested safety documentation, and Indiana Attorney General Curtis Hill's office has appealed the judge's ruling to the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago. The clinic will perform medication-induced abortions for women who are up to 10 weeks pregnant.

Brown County Park, lodge remain closed

NASHVILLE — The Indiana Department of Natural Resources says Brown County State Park and its Abe Martin Lodge will remain closed through Sunday because of a lack of a potable water supply caused by recent heavy rainfall. The DNR said Tuesday there's still too much sediment from last weekend's heavy rainfall going into its water system to allow the production of potable water. The park's water source is Ogle Lake inside the park. DNR said the scheduled occupancy for the park's 612 campsites for the weekend was about 41 percent, and all of the lodge's 172 rooms and cabins were booked. People with reservations are being offered refunds or the opportunity to move them to other campgrounds or other state park inns with available space. The park first closed at 4 p.m. Monday.

Ethanol plant accident kills Ohio worker

BLUFFTON — Police say a man died Wednesday morning after becoming trapped in a piece of equipment at the Valero Renewable Fuels plant in Bluffton, about 25 miles south of Fort Wayne. The Wells County coroner identified the man as Ryan West, 42, of Bainbridge, Ohio. Valero spokeswoman Lillian Riojas said he was employed by Diversified Industrial Services. Bluffton Police Chief Kyle Randall said he has called in the Indiana State Police to investigate the accident.

Kentucky

Jobless rate stays unchanged in May

FRANKFORT — Officials say the state's unemployment rate was unchanged in May. The Kentucky Center for Statistics said the state's seasonally adjusted jobless rate was 4 percent last month. The preliminary figure matched April's rate but was down from the 4.4 percent rate in May 2018. State officials say Kentucky's leisure and hospitality sector added 1,800 positions from April to May of this year. They say construction employment increased by 800 jobs in May, while employment in the educational and health services sector rose by 200 jobs last month. They say employment in the state's professional and business services sector fell by 1,100 jobs in May. The financial activities sector reported 600 fewer jobs in May.

Car search coerced by police officer

LOUISVILLE — A judge has ruled that police coerced a man into allowing officers to search his car, leading to charges including violating a protective order by carrying a gun. The Courier Journal reported Judge Annie O'Connell has since thrown out the evidence and will have the felony charges dropped against Miguel A. Ballard Jr. Ballard was pulled over last year for not wearing a seat belt, and he refused to allow officers to search his van. Louisville police Detective William Mayo told Ballard that two types of people refuse searches, using an obscenity for one group and describing the other as "people who have something to hide." Ballard then consented. The ruling means Ballard will only pay a fine for failing to wear a seat belt. Police spokeswoman Jessie Halladay said Wednesday that an internal investigation is ongoing.

UofL law prof tapped for federal bench

LOUISVILLE — A 37-year-old conservative law professor who previously served as a clerk for a U.S. Supreme Court justice has been nominated to become a federal judge. The White House announced Wednesday that President Donald Trump had tapped Justin Walker for the role. Walker clerked for U.S. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy. He also clerked for Justice Brett Kavanaugh during Kavanaugh's time on the U.S. Court of Appeals. Walker is an assistant professor of law at the University of Louisville. He's also a partner at Dinsmore & Shohl and a member of the conservative Federalist Society. The Courier-Journal reported he would succeed Judge Joseph McKinley in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Kentucky. McKinley assumed senior status on the court earlier this month. Walker awaits U.S. Senate confirmation.

Possible suspension for giving inmate $11

BELLEVUE — A lawyer may be suspended for giving her incarcerated boyfriend $11 to use a vending machine. The Cincinnati Enquirer reported Virginia Riggs was convicted of promoting contraband in the 2017 meeting, given a suspended jail sentence and reported herself to the Cincinnati and Kentucky bar associations. The Cincinnati Bar Association, the Ohio Supreme Court's board overseeing attorney conduct, and Riggs agreed to a six-month suspension, to be served if Riggs engages in further misconduct. But Ohio Supreme Court Chief Justice Maureen O'Connor rejected the agreement and told the board to consider more severe sanctions. The board said similar cases have gotten the same proposed punishment.

Smog-reduction ban lifted to help corn growers

EPA moves to allow year-round E-15 ethanol fuel sales

By ENRIQUE SAENZ
Indiana Environmental Reporter

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency lifted a ban on the sale of higher ethanol blends of gasoline during the summer months, a move that will benefit corn growers in Indiana but could adversely affect the environment.

The decision allows the sale of gasoline blended with up to 15 percent ethanol, a renewable fuel made from corn and other plant materials, throughout the entire year. It also ends an E15 ban put in place during the Obama administration to reduce smog pollution.

Ethanol proponents say removing the ban will help consumers and the environment.

"This move to approve the year-round use of E15 in time for the summer driving season provides consumers with more choices when they fill up at the pump, driving demand for our farmers and improving the air we breathe," said U.S. Department of Agriculture secretary Sonny Perdue.

Corn growers in the Midwest are experiencing a streak of setbacks, making the lifted ban of even greater interest for the Indiana economy.

Heavy spring precipitation has slowed this year's corn planting to a crawl. By June 10, only 67 percent of the 5.5 million acres of farmland scheduled for corn were planted. Last year, all of the state's corn was planted by that date.

A tariff battle between the U.S. and China has hurt corn exports as well. Despite record corn production, the USDA projected a 25 million-bushel decline in exports in the next year.

Allowing ethanol to be sold throughout the year would help the corn industry in Indiana recover from the setbacks.

Indiana is the fifth-largest producer of ethanol in the nation. The state's 13 ethanol plants make about 1.2 billion gallons of ethanol each year.

"Ethanol is a vital consumer of Indiana corn, and any expanded use of ethanol financially helps Hoosier farmers," said Sarah Delbecq, president of the Indiana Corn Growers Association, in a statement. "This rule, which supports ethanol use and promotes corn demand, has certainly been a long time coming, and Indiana growers definitely welcome this announcement."

Growers say nationwide adoption of E15 could drive the production of 7 billion gallons of biofuels and create a demand for 2 billion bushels of corn each year.

While the ethanol rule change has the potential to help the state's corn growers, critics say the move could hurt the state's environment.

The EPA, one of ethanol's main critics, is the same agency responsible for lifting the E15 summer ban.

A 2018 EPA report found that biofuel production associated with large-scale cultivation of corn and soybeans results in an overall negative environmental impact. Researchers found that ethanol from corn grain has higher emissions across the life-cycle than ethanol from other sources. Most ethanol plants in the U.S. are coal-powered, which contributes to greenhouse gas emissions.

That finding is not representative of Indiana's ethanol plants, which are mostly powered by natural gas.

Besides emissions, the EPA found that ethanol production also adversely affects other aspects of the local environment. The report's authors found that demand for biofuel stocks could contribute to algal blooms and hypoxia in local bodies of water, have negative impacts to ecosystem health and biodiversity, and lead to the loss of soil nutrients and organic matter.

The biofuel industry disagrees with the EPA's findings. A year earlier, the Biotechnology Innovation Organization, a trade organization representing the biotechnology industry, released its own assessment of ethanol's environmental impact.

The organization says it found that summer use of E15 over the next 10 years can save between 7 million and 10.4 million metric tons of carbon dioxide-equivalent greenhouse gas emissions, the equivalent of taking at least 1.4 million cars off the road.

Every bit of ethanol that is allowed in a gallon of gasoline means fewer oil products are being sold. The boon to the ethanol industry will force it to butt heads with the oil industry, setting off a back-and-forth battle between the two.

The oil industry has already tried to take on ethanol with its use of EPA financial U.S. Renewable Fuel Standard Program hardship waivers.

The renewal fuel standards program is a federal program put in place in 2005 that requires transportation fuel sold in the U.S. to contain a minimum volume of renewable fuels like ethanol or buy compliance credits from competitors that do. The program was intended to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and expand the nation's renewable fuels sector while reducing reliance on imported oil.

The program allows the EPA to let refiners that produce less than 75,000 a day bypass the renewable fuel requirements by claiming the regulation would cause financial hardship, through what are called Small Refinery Exemptions.

Lawmakers in ethanol-producing states have argued that the Trump administration has allowed large or unqualified refiners to claim hardships. News agency Reuters found that Exxon Mobil Corp., a company that makes around $20 billion every year, applied for and received a financial hardship waiver for a refinery in Montana.

The waivers reduce the demand for corn and corn-based ethanol, while increasing uncertainty in farmers' economic projections.

"These waivers directly impacted rural America and corn farmers," said Delbecq. "With immense uncertainty now and in the future for the ag economy due to planting delays and trade disruptions, more waiver abuse would only exacerbate the damage to farmers' bottom line and overall demand for corn. To offer a source of stability, the EPA needs to fulfill the intended goals and promises in the original RFS."

A bipartisan group of 35 members of Congress, including Rep. James R. Baird, from Indiana's 4th Congressional district, sent a letter to EPA administrator Andrew Wheeler addressing the perceived waiver problem. The delegation wants the EPA to stop granting improper small refinery exemption waivers and force the distribution of ethanol prevented due to the waivers.

The American Fuel & Petrochemical Manufacturers trade association filed a lawsuit to block the E15 expansion, escalating the battle between the oil and corn industries. The group says the federal government lacks the authority to make E15 available during summer months by making regulatory changes to ethanol restrictions.

"An E15 waiver is in no way a fix for the shortcomings of the RFS, which has for years plagued markets with volatility," said AFPM president and CEO Chet Thompson.

The AFPM has intervened in other renewable fuel standards decisions that sought to increase the amount of ethanol in the federally mandated ethanol-gasoline blend. The group argued that the RFS is ineffective in its goal to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and only exists to prop up a struggling ethanol industry.

The Government Accountability Office, the agency responsible for reviewing how taxpayer dollars are spent, found that the renewable fuel standards had a limited effect on greenhouse gas emissions due to its reliance on conventional corn-starch ethanol. The GAO's auditors found that the ethanol blends allowed by the renewable fuel standards have a smaller potential to reduce greenhouse gas emissions compared with advanced biofuels, and that most ethanol is produced in plants exempt from emissions reduction requirements. The renewable fuel standards has also resulted in higher gasoline prices in states outside the Midwest.

The Trump administration will continue to back biofuels and farmers in the near future.

On Tuesday, President Donald Trump signed an executive order directing the federal government to implement broad recommendations outlined by the Agriculture and Rural Prosperity Task Force to speed up reviews of biotechnology.

say a passenger vehicle traveling the wrong way on Interstate 65 crashed into a charter bus and a semitruck, killing one and injuring several others. Kentucky State Police Trooper Jeremiah Hodges told news outlets the smaller vehicle was traveling northbound in the southbound lanes when the crash occurred Thursday morning near Bonnieville. He said Charles Cartwright, 37, of Louisville, the driver of the passenger vehicle, died. Bus driver Michael Whitefield, 38, of Escondido, California, and six of 35 bus passengers were taken to hospitals with non-life-threatening injuries.

Prosecutor drops death penalty, witness lied

ELIZABETHTOWN — A death penalty case has unraveled after a prosecutor said he can't go forward because a key witness can't be truthful at trial. Hardin County prosecutor Shane Young said no physical evidence shows Aaron Pearson was complicit in the murder of Army veteran Norman Hall, 71. Young said testimony from another suspect, Eloysia James-Venerable, was key to a conviction. She was given a plea deal limiting her time to at least 20 years if she told the truth.

Solar energy offerings expand in Indiana, Illinois

New programs underway including the Wabash Valley

(Terre Haute) Tribune-Star

Efforts are underway to expand affordable solar power in Indiana and Illinois, including in the Wabash Valley.

In Indiana, the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission has approved a Duke Energy customer pilot program that makes it easier for businesses, schools and nonprofits to have solar energy at their facilities.

Under the program, these eligible customers lease a solar energy facility from Duke Energy for a period of up to 20 years, while Duke Energy installs, operates, owns and maintains the facility.

Customers would receive all of the kilowatt-hour output of the solar energy equipment through a net-metering arrangement.

It gives customers the advantages for solar power with minimal upfront costs and no maintenance fees.

"This program gives our business and nonprofit customers, including schools and local governments, another option to incorporate clean, renewable energy into their energy mix through a cost-effective leasing arrangement," Stan Pinegar, Duke Energy president for Indiana, said in a news release.

Initial capacity is limited to a total of 10 megawatts for eligible customers within the Duke Energy Indiana service territory.

All costs associated with the voluntary program will be borne by participating customers only; non-participating customers are not effected.

This program joins the company's other efforts to promote clean, renewable solar power, including building and operating a 17-megawatt solar plant at a southern Indiana naval base and purchasing up to 20 megawatt of solar power from four solar sites that generate up to 5 megawatt each.

Duke also is investing in battery storage technology in Indiana in the town of Nabb and at Camp Atterbury. The company is also funding $1.5 million in research at the Battery Innovation Center at the Crane Naval Surface Warfare Center to study how battery storage can maximize renewable power sources.

Other renewable programs include the company's GoGreen Indiana program, which gives customers the ability to support the development of green power sources. Customers can purchase a minimum of two 100-kilowatt-hour blocks of green power for $1.80 per month. The 200-kWh commitment equates to about 20 percent of an average residential customer's energy use and helps to avoid 4,800 pounds of carbon dioxide emissions each year.

In east central Illinois, the Solarize East Central Illinois program began in May and continues.

The program provides an opportunity for residents to learn about the benefits and costs of solar electricity. Interested property owners can choose to invest in renewable energy solar installations with savings on installation cost through the power of volume purchasing.

Lake Land College, Effingham Recycles, Effingham's Impact 2030, Coles Progressives, the Charleston Huddle, and the Midwest Renewable Energy Association have come together to sponsor the bulk solar group purchase program for residents and businesses located anywhere within the Lake Land College District boundaries.

The Lake College district covers an area including all or a majority of Coles, Cumberland, Effingham, Shelby, Moultrie, Fayette, Edgar, and Clark counties, as well as portions of several others.

Over the next few months, members of the public may attend any of the free, no-obligation, one-hour long information sessions provided by Midwest Renewable Energy Association and Lake Land College.

These "Solar Power Hours" are scheduled at various locations throughout the Lake Land College district and will provide interested people with information about how this solar group buy works, what is involved in a solar installation, how it integrates with their current electric provider, what they might expect as a typical cost, what incentives and rebates are available, how long it might take for the system to pay for itself, and more.

Planned solar farm could spur increase in electric bills

By JEFF PARROTT
South Bend Tribune

GRANGER — Indiana Michigan Power Co. plans to build a $37 million solar farm southeast of Bittersweet Road and the Indiana Toll Road, its largest in Indiana, and it will seek state approval of another rate increase to help pay for it, according to records the utility has filed with regulators.

Fort Wayne-based I&M, a subsidiary of American Electric Power, has petitioned the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission to recover the project's costs through a base rate increase it filed May 14. If the IURC won't allow that, I&M will try to recoup the costs by increasing monthly bills in another way, through a "solar power rider," according to I&M's filings with the IURC.

Last month's base rate increase request came a year after I&M won approval of a $93 million revenue increase in May 2018, hiking a monthly 1,000-kWh bill from $126 to $141. The utility in September 2017 initially had requested a $263 million increase, which would have increased such a bill to $151.

The Indiana Office of Utility Consumer Counselor, the state agency that advocates for consumers in regulated utility cases, has started its technical and legal reviews of both new cases but has not yet determined how the proposals would affect monthly bills if approved, said OUCC spokesman Anthony Swinger.

I&M plans to start building the solar farm in May and have it operational by the end of next year. Some homeowners in Prairie Lane subdivision, whose Campfire Drive backyards overlook the Toll Road and the site, expressed mixed views on the project Monday. None said they would mind having the solar panels nearby.

Give your two cents worth

The Indiana Office of Utility Consumer Counselor invites written consumer comments on Indiana Michigan Power Co.'s two recent rate hike requests before the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission. A South Bend public hearing also will be scheduled.

Often stopped by trains? Feds want to know, seeking input

By DAVE TAYLOR
(Terre Haute) Tribune-Star

Federal officials are seeking public input on blocked railroad crossings and they just may get an earful from Terre Haute.

"I hope they have empty email boxes because they're going to fill up with people (contacting) them," Fire Chief Jeff Fisher said Tuesday. "They could get their case study done right here in Terre Haute."

Fisher said fire department vehicles have to detour around stopped or slow-moving trains at least three or four times every day.

"That is why we have our fire stations strategically built around the city and that is why we have eight stations instead of five — because of the railroad tracks," he said.

Citing such safety concerns, the Federal Railroad Administration recently issued a federal register notice to obtain information on the frequency, location and impact of blocked crossings. Pedestrians crawling under or through idling trains and motorists driving around crossing gates are also listed as concerns.

The notice also recognizes potential economic impacts when restaurants and other businesses are not accessible for extended periods and what it calls "societal nuisances" such as traffic congestion, missed appointments, disrupted school and work schedules and late deliveries.

That's especially a concern for Donna Hux, manager of the Pizza City restaurant at 919 Walnut St., just east of a railroad crossing.

"It's a very big problem whenever they stop for 30 minutes or 45 minutes," Hux said.

When that happens, "our drivers can't take anything on the west side of the tracks or they have to go all the way north or all the way south."

Hux said Pizza City delivery drivers are also stopped by blocked trains three or four times a day.

Indiana's U.S Senators, Todd Young and Mike Braun, as well as U.S. Rep. Pete Visclosky, D-Gary, issued a news release urging Hoosiers to provide input.

"I have heard from numerous Hoosier communities about the impact of blocked railroad crossings," said Young. "I encourage Indiana communities to submit detailed information to further the FRA's review. I appreciate the FRA's attention to this important public safety issue and will continue working with Hoosier stakeholders to identify a solution."

Braun said, "Hoosiers deserve a straightforward approach about information regarding blocked railroad crossings and I commend the Federal Railroad Administration's willingness to work with all parties involved on this important issue."

No federal laws or regulations address how long trains may block crossings and the Indiana Supreme Court in 2018 found local ordinances on blocked crossings unconstitutional.

How to comment

The Federal Railroad Administration is seeking public input through Aug. 13 on specific incidents involving blocked railroad crossings. More information, including a link to make a comment, is at http://bit.ly/2XWJH9X.

Federal study finds Hoosiers rank 3rd in vaping study

By CHRISTINE STEPHENSON
(Bedford) Times-Mail

BEDFORD — Dakota Caraway uses his vape throughout the day every day until he goes to bed.

Caraway started vaping the day he turned 18 to kick his tobacco chewing habit. And it's helped, he said.

"I haven't chewed in two and half years," the 20 year old said. "I feel a lot better ... I'm more active and I can breathe easier."

Caraway is among tens of thousands of adult Hoosiers who vape. Recent self-reported data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention revealed Indiana has the third highest adult vaping rate in the country, according to a recent QuoteWizard analysis.

But it's not just adults — 3.6 million U.S. middle- and high-schoolers reported using them, as well.

E-cigarettes, or vapes, don't contain tobacco, so most health professionals agree they aren't as damaging as cigarettes.

But not everyone agrees that they are helpful tools, especially when it comes to teenagers using them.

"A lot of people think e-cigarette vapor isn't harmful … it most certainly is," said Troi Stith, Lawrence County's tobacco cessation and prevention coordinator at Hoosier Uplands.

"We have a huge issue in high schools, middle schools and even some elementary schools with Juuls and e-cigarettes in general."

Regardless of why they started or whether they are better off or not, a significant number of Hoosiers are using vapes. And soon, they might be penalized for it.

Under the Affordable Care Act, many health insurers include an extra fee for those who identify as smokers.

The fee, called the Tobacco Use Surcharge, forces self-reported smokers in states such as Indiana to pay premiums up to a maximum of 50 percent.

E-cigarettes were classified as tobacco products by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration a few years ago, but most health insurers are still stuck on what to do.

Adam Johnson, the QuoteWizard analyst who conducted the vaping study, said the increased prevalence of teenagers using e-cigarettes could push insurers to add a vaping surcharge, as well.

Although insurers may not have a definite plan in the works, Johnson said, he believes e-cigarette surcharges will become more likely as today's teens get older and need their own health insurance plans.

"It's only going to increase as these middle- and high-schoolers become of age," he said. "It's certainly something worth monitoring."

For some experts, the potential e-cigarette surcharge isn't the biggest concern right now. It's how the smokers and vapers are going to be helped.

Jon Macy is an associate professor at Indiana University Bloomington who specializes in public health policy and tobacco use, cessation and prevention.

He said he thinks the rise in health care costs for e-cigarette users may or may not happen. But if it does, there is going to be an even greater need for efficient tobacco cessation programs.

Throughout his years of research, he said he has noticed states with the highest smoking and vaping rates — such as Indiana — are also the states with the poorest public health funding.

"The place where it gets tricky is when you penalize people for having an addiction and then don't help them to quit," Macy said. "We know it costs a ton to take care of smokers … but you need to accompany it with counseling, nicotine replacement therapy …"

Whether it's lifelong smokers who are using e-cigarettes to quit or those that just got caught up in the trend of vaping, Macy said no one should be left alone to kick addiction. And it's going to take more than individual health care providers or the smokers themselves to fix it.

"The state legislature has eroded most of the funding for tobacco cessation over the years," he said. "It all comes down to what the state and what its elected officials value."

Traditionally, e-cigarettes were marketed to adult smokers looking to cut back or quit. But a few years ago, companies such as Juul started marketing their vapes toward younger people, most of whom had never even smoked a cigarette before, according to Truth Initiative, America's biggest public health nonprofit to focus on tobacco cessation.

Stith often visits schools to teach students about the dangers of vaping and said most of the time the kids — and adults — don't know how just harmful it is.

And it's not really their fault, she said. Vapes haven't been around long enough to have reliable data about long-term effects, and they're usually marketed as relatively harmless.

But this isn't true, Stith said. Some vape cartridges can still contain enough nicotine to roughly equal a pack of cigarettes.

Not all of the students who vape use those with nicotine in them, Stith clarified. But most do.

"You'd be very, very hard pressed to find those that don't have nicotine in them," she said.

Some vapes can cause even more harm than cigarettes, Stith said. A chemical called diacetyl, which is found in many e-cigarette flavors, can lead to lung scarring and narrowed airways if inhaled. It's more commonly referred to as "popcorn lung."

Even when Stith tells the students about health effects like this, it still sometimes doesn't reach them.

The thing that works most often, she said, is when she explains how secondary smoke can affect their families, especially younger siblings and pets.

Because they want the best for their loved ones, she said. It's not that they're bad kids. It's more complicated than that.

• Madison's reasons

$52,500 annually as well as other contributions based on three-year averages of their overall enrollment and overall assessed valuation and that is what makes Madison's contribution higher than some of the schools.

"Each corporation has a membership/administration fee per the operating agreement as well as a share of the operations budget. The SCC membership cooperatively owns everything at SCC," Marshall said, noting that includes more than $3 million worth of equipment used to train students.

The reaction to the move has stirred quiet a bit of reaction on social media but the comments seem to be well-balanced between those who think Madison should stay and those who think it's time to leave.

Studebaker said it was a decision that was a long time in the making.

"We've been talking about that for a year and half but the decision probably wasn't made — for sure made — until probably the last month or two," the superintendent said. "We kept inching toward the decision but then we actually did it in the last month or two when the decision was pretty apparent what we needed to do.

"We're not upset with the career center and we think they provide a quality product. It just fiscally doesn't make any sense to us."

Studebaker has said Madison will be able to serve — and possibly better serve — a lot of its center students through the existing Cub Manufacturing and Cub Engineering programs and a new Cub Diesel program and by using classes available at Ivy Tech.

However, he noted, Madison will not be able to replicate all the programs offered at the center so he hopes a new agreement can be forged with the board — of which he is a member — to continue to serve those students.

"We are investigating a lot of options. We're working hard to put together a program. Prior to Madison schools being a member of the Career Center we actually had an agreement where we sent kids up there on a tuition basis. We would pay more on that tuition rate — more than we do (in tuition) as a member — but right now when you look at our overall costs it would be cheaper for us to go back to a tuition-based type of situation for those programs we're not going to be able to replicate," Studebaker said.

He said the center's cosmetology program is a perfect example and there may be some others.

"We are considering that and we want to do that if that is our best path for those programs we can't duplicate because we know we're not going to be able to duplicate everything and we do have some juniors who are currently scheduled to start their first year up there and we want them to be able to finish," Studebaker said. "I believe that they are interested in allowing us to do that, but it's going to take a bylaw change and we're working on that. It's a little premature to know for sure but we do have a couple of months to get that done."

Marshall said the facility is currently membership-driven by the participating schools and any move to allow a non-member to send students there would require board consideration and action. However, he said, the last thing the SCC wants to do is hurt students.

"We don't want to hurt Madison's graduation rate or our students in any form." Marshall said.

Marshall also said losing students from Madison will not deter the center from its mission and that the facility's faculty and programs will survive the loss of funding.

"We wish to retain every MCS student that we can. We do understand that there will be a loss of revenue but the impact will be no more than $20,000 per remaining corporation and I hope through a proper budget that the impact will be less than $10,000 per remaining corporation for the entire 2020-2021 school year," Marshall said. "We evaluate our programs each year and do not believe this will cause us to have any reduction in force or programming."

Students charge IU misled about mold

By MICHAEL RESCHKE
(Bloomington) Herald-Times

A recent court filing alleges Indiana University engaged in a misleading and deceptive public relations campaign to downplay the severity of a mold outbreak.

The lawsuit, filed late last month in Monroe Circuit Court 6, cites emails between university officials as evidence IU knowingly misrepresented the cause of the outbreak and sought to influence what medical providers listed as possible causes of ailments. A university spokesman disputed the claims and said excerpts from emails cited in the court filing were taken out of context.

The plaintiffs, students who lived in dorms affected by mold last school year, are seeking class status through Monroe Circuit Court 6. They allege the university knew about mold issues in residence halls for years before the 2018-19 school year, but initially blamed the recent outbreak on the weather. The court filing included the following excerpt of an email attributed to an unidentified university official:

"I just saw on the web page that we do suggest that mold was due to extra heat and humidity this year. I strongly suggest we take down that statement immediately. The first rule of crisis communication is to apologize and take the blame — do not try to deflect."

The court filing also included a discussion between IU officials about what university health center employees should tell students about the cause of their allergies. When the source of those allergies are unknown, a provider may list mold as one of the many triggers, according to an email from Peter Grogg, executive director of the IU Health Center, to David O'Guinn, vice provost for student affairs and dean of students. The email continued:

"It is impossible for us to know if mold exists in the residence halls, so it's unlikely that our providers would point to mold as the sole trigger. Anyway, although Pat (Connor, executive director of RPS) admits that there is mold in some of the residence halls, he has asked that we stop saying to patients that his/her (symptoms) may be triggered by that very same mold."

Chuck Carney, IU spokesman, said in a statement the allegation in the court filing is based on a single email in a larger thread of communication.

"We have revisited this with the IU Student Health Center's executive director and medical director," Carney said in the statement. "They are emphatic that the doctors and health professionals there have never been pressured to downplay health effects from mold or to make any specific diagnosis."

Carney also said university officials never misrepresented the cause of the mold and have "vigilantly looked for a variety of potential causes."

IU is planning a $56 million renovation of Foster and McNutt residence halls this summer to address the ongoing mold problem. The residence halls were originally scheduled for renovation in phases during the 2021-22 and 2022-23 school years.

Despite efforts to clean up the mold in those residence halls, the university has been unable to eliminate it.

Rowlett wins PHR regional title

Madison 6th grader now waits to see if she advances to the MLB All-Star game

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Kennedy Rowlett of Madison walked away with top honors in Major League Baseball's Pitch, Hit and Run Team competition for the second time in three years.

After advancing through the local and sectional PHR competitions host by the Madison Parks Department in April and May, Kennedy competed in the girls 9-10 year old division on Saturday, June 15 at Great American Ball Park in Cincinnati where she placed first. Cypress Aliota of Evansville placed second and Sa'Rynedi Broyles of Hamilton, Ohio placed third.

Other place winners were: 7-8 Softball — 1. Liana Hartman, Evansville, Ind., 2. Harper Fisher, Hagerstown, Ind., 3. Madelynn Witt, Eaton, Ohio; 11-12 Softball — 1. Destiny Gaines, Shelburn, Ind., 2. Alivia Garrett, Evansville, Ind., 3. Brooklyn Osterloh, Minster, Ohio; 13-14 Softball — 1. Emma Bolding, Greenfield, Ind., 2. Bailey Terry, Brodhead, Ky., 3. Addison Inskeep, Minster, Ohio; 7-8 Baseball — Andrew Elam III, Georgetown, Ky., 2. Jett Reynolds, Bowling Green, Ky., 3. Braylen Baldwin, Indianapolis, Ind.; 9-10 Baseball — 1. Max Brunkel, Hebron, Ky., 2. Leron Gilley, Bowling Green, Ky., 3. Nicholas Marker, Eaton, Ohio; 11-12 Baseball — 1. Trey Schabel, Speedway, Ind., 2. Leeland Creamer, Hopkinsville, Ky., 3. Quinton Miller, Owenton, Ky.; 13-14 Baseball — 1. Justin Hermann, Cincinnati, Ohio, 2. Jaxon Henke, Evansville, Ind., 3. Jakob Gross, Greenwood, Ind.

Kennedy, the daughter of Jeff and Kattie Rowlett of Madison and who will be a sixth grader this school year, now awaits word from Major League Baseball to see if her score qualifies her for a trip to the All-Star game in Cleveland next month.

By ROB LAFARY

Mason Welsh and Zach Forner both played a key role for Madison throughout the 2019 baseball season and on Wednesday, the Cub duo showed they belonged among the state's best after they displayed their talents in the 2019 Indiana High School Baseball Coaches Association Future's Showcase held at Gary O'Neal Field.

Forner, who will be a junior this upcoming school year, and Welsh, an incoming senior, played the back end of an all-star doubleheader that showcased some of the best underclass talent in front of both high school and college coaches. The event kicked off the sport's all-star week hosted by Madison High School, which concludes this weekend with the annual North/South Senior All-Star Classic.

"We didn't know how the weather was going to play out today but this was a great day," Madison head baseball coach Tim Armstrong said. "Our coaching staff and many others were out here early getting the field ready so these young men could enjoy the showcase. The rain held off and I think everyone here enjoyed this experience today."

Underclassmen participants were put through a variety of drills Wednesday morning before being split up into four teams, each playing one six-inning game with a showcase format.

Forner and Welsh each played for Team Grey, which fell to Team Blue 9-7 after Hauser's Trey Johnson hit a go-ahead two-run home run in the bottom of the sixth inning. But the Cub crew played to the purpose of any showcase and put their individual talents to the forefront.

Forner drilled a booming shot to right field for a double and later scored in the top of the first inning, representing game two's first hit and run en route to a 2-for-3 day. The Madison first baseman grounded out in the top of the third but bounced back in the top of the fifth with another double, this time driving in two runs and scoring on a sacrifice fly by Charlestown's Drew Fifer.

"I've never been a part of something like this and the competition was great," Forner said. "I did better

Tereshko finishes 9 back at Amateur

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison's Brandon Tereshko finished the rain-shortened Indiana Amateur Championship at one-over and tied for 18th on Thursday at Purgatory Golf Club in Noblesville.

Tereshko, a 2010 Madison graduate and current head golf coach at Hanover College, came into the third round on Wednesday just four strokes back of the leaders. But like the rest of the field, he only completed roughly half of his round before heavy rain washed out the rest of the day.

With the championship shortened to 54 holes, Tereshko was unable to make a move to compete for the title. He shot a two-over 74 on Thursday and finished the tournament with a one-over 217 (75-68-74).

Tereshko

A pair of Big Ten rivals finished the event tied atop the leaderboard with Purdue junior Joe Weiler picking up the win in the second playoff hole over recent Indiana graduate Jack Sparrow.

Neither Weiler nor Sparrow were leading the event coming into the third round but the pair quickly worked their way to the top and were tied when play was suspended on Wednesday.

Sparrow, a former Floyd Central Highlander, took the lead with an eagle on No. 15 but Weiler came back to take a birdie on 18 to force the playoff with each eight-under with a 208.

Two wayward tee shots on the second hole found Sparrow and Weiler short of the green with their second shots. Sparrow found the bunker with his third and failed to get up-and-down out of the bunker. After Sparrow's bogey putt missed on the left side, Weiler rolled in a 10-footer for par to claim the Indiana Amateur Championship and his first Indiana Golf title.

"This is a really big win for me," said Weiler. "It's good for my confidence. I had a good year at Purdue, but couldn't put together a great tournament last season. This solidifies for me that I can finish a tournament and a round well."

Recent Southwestern High School graduate as well as Hanover College's Caleb Lung and Charlie Bullerdick, each competed in the tournament but failed to make the cut.

Thurston throws scoreless inning

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison's Ryan Thurston pitched a scoreless inning in the Gary SouthShore RailCats' 2-1 loss at Fargo-Moorhead on Thursday afternoon.

Thurston

All of the scoring in the seven-inning game came in the second when Gary scored one run in the top half and Fargo pushed two across in the bottom half.

Thurston entered the game in relief of starter Justin Sinibaldi in the sixth inning. As he has done for much of the season in the independent American Association, Thurston went through the lineup almost unscathed. He allowed a hit but struck out two without issuing a walk.

In 13 innings this season, Thurston has allowed three earned runs on eight hits with 12 strikeouts and seven walks. He has yet to record a decision.

Gary begins a three-game series in St. Paul on Friday.

Dominate US side backing up the talk

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

LE HAVRE, France — Maybe they are as good as they say they are.

The United States is moving through the World Cup field like sharks through the Atlantic.

"The message is that we're on our game, that we're building momentum, that we've gotten some good results, we've scored some good goals and we haven't let any goals in," defender Becky Sauerbrunn said after Thursday night's more dominating that it appeared 2-0 win over Sweden completed a record-setting group phase. "So I hope the teams that are preparing for us are getting ready for what's going to be a really, really tough match."

The American Outlaws supporters in red, white and blue filled the trains north from Paris. As gulls flew overhead on a mild and breezy afternoon, they walked the streets and museums of this coastal Normandy town with their "Tour de Four" T-shirts, signifying the fourth title they hope the U.S. brings home on July 7.

They were still in their throaty start-of-game chants when Lindsey Horan scored 2 minutes, 40 seconds in, the fastest goal of the tournament. By the time Tobin Heath's 50th-minute shot deflected off Jonna Andersson for an own goal, the Outlaws' "We are the U.S.!" chant had been met by a playful "You are the U.S.!" response from the ever-polite Swedes at the other end of the Stade Oceane.

Now the route through the field is clear and the heat really will be on for Monday's round of 16 match against 13th-ranked Spain at Reims — where the temperature is expected to be in the 90s. The winner meets host France or Brazil in a quarterfinal in Paris, and possible semifinal opponents include England, Australia, Norway or Cameroon.

A few numbers to digest:

The U.S. set a record with 18 group phase goals, one more than Norway in 1995. The Americans ended the group stage unscored on for the first time in team history. They started 3-0 for the first time since 2003.

Despite the relative ease of passage, coach Jill Ellis insisted complacency is not a concern.

"This team is firmly rooted on the ground," she maintained. "These players have played this game long enough to know you have to earn every result."

At least for three games, the Americans routed rivals in the same manner Barcelona beats up La Liga opponents. The U.S. had an 83-9 advantage in shots in the three games and had 75% possession against Thailand, 68% vs. Chile and 58% against the Swedes.

Alyssa Naeher — remember her? — had to make just four saves over the three matches, getting only infrequent tests in her first World Cup succeeding Hope Solo as the Americans' No. 1 goalkeeper.

"I don't think the first two games sent a message. They weren't great teams to be honest. With that said, you have to go out and perform," midfielder Megan Rapinoe said, laughing. "I feel like we have a big target on our back already. So I don't know how much bigger it can get with the performance."

Eight players produced 17 goals (plus there was an own goal), led by Alex Morgan with five, Carli Lloyd with three, and Horan, Rose Lavelle and Sam Mewis with two apiece.

"We love to just share the ball," left back Crystal Dunn said. "I think at the end of the day the team that is going to go on and win is the team that has so many threats and doesn't rely on one player. And I think people should know that we rotate our players. We have a strong 23, so we're always fresh and ready to go."

True, but the U.S. has not yet faced a moment of adversity, has not trailed, has not had to overcome a red card or a tournament-ending injury to a starter.

"We talk about from there down, everybody can kind of be the same, physically, tactically, all that kind of stuff," Ellis said, holding a hand horizontally in front of her neck, "But from here up, sometimes that mentality piece is I think really important. So to have the players in a good place with self-belief I think makes my job easier, because certainly they are highly motivated and hungry."

No matter how much they have entertained thus far, these players will be remembered for what happens over the next 2½ weeks, not the opening onslaught.

"This was an important game for us to figure out about ourselves," Heath said. "Now we're really going to see what we're made of."

Pacers select European center 18th; Romeo Langford goes 14th to Celtics

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indiana Pacers were so convinced center Goga Bitadze was a lottery pick that coach Nate McMillan didn't even study his game tape.

So when he fell to No. 18, president of basketball operations Kevin Pritchard pounced.

The Pacers selected the 6-foot-11, 245-pound European with their first pick in Thursday's NBA draft, adding depth and size to a front line that may be undergoing a major summer overhaul.

"A lot of people had him as a top 10 or top 12 pick and when everyone saw he had an opportunity to fall to us, everyone in that room started going crazy," McMillan said a few minutes after the selection was announced. "I didn't study him because we didn't think he'd fall to us but from the conversation in the room, he's ready to play now."

That's good news for a team that has three starters — including both forwards — and five players who finished the season in the rotation about to become free agents.

Bitadze, a native of Georgia, logged 47 games last season playing in three different European leagues. He saw his most action in the Adriatic League where he averaged 14.0 points, 7.5 rebound and 1.7 blocks in 30 games.

But the Pacers view him as more than just a big man.

"He's very similar to (Domantas) Sabonis because he's a guy who can step out and shoot the ball, he can handle the ball, he's a good passer and he definitely can defend the basket and block shots," McMillan said.

And if he is ready to play, he could become a key answer to the many questions facing the Pacers as free agency begins.

Forwards Thaddeus Young and Bojan Bogdanovic, point guards Darren Collison and Cory Joseph are all slated to hit the open market next week. So is Wesley Matthews, who started after signing with the Pacers following Victor Oladipo's season-ending injury.

Oladipo continues to recover from a ruptured quad tendon in his right leg and the timeline for his return remains unclear. Director of player personnel Ryan Carr told reporters Monday he didn't know if Oladipo was expected back for October's season opener.

"He's doing well, we know he's doing well but I haven't been told that," McMillan said when asked if Oladipo may not return till January. "So for someone else to say January or the beginning of the season, that's hard to know.,"

Clearly, Pritchard isn't waiting to sort things out and the moves began even before commissioner Adam Silver started announcing names.

ESPN first reported Pritchard acquired forward T.J. Warren and a second-round pick, No. 32 overall, from Phoenix in exchange for cash. Phoenix clears up salary-cap space by sending the injury-prone Warren and his three-year, $35 million deal to Indiana, which gets a solid scorer with starting experience. Warren averaged 18.0 points and 4.0 rebounds in 43 games last season.

Langford goes 14th

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics selected Romeo Langford with the 14th pick in the NBA draft as they look to fortify a roster facing massive uncertainly with free agency looming.

The Celtics also hold the 20th, 22nd and 51st picks.

In his lone season at Indiana, the 6-foot-6 Langford played through a thumb injury and led the Big Ten and finished sixth nationally in freshman scoring, averaging 16.5 points. He is the third wing player Boston has selected in the first round in the last four drafts.

"I knew what I was capable of doing. I've been doing it for a long time," Langford said after his selection.

It could be an interesting night as Boston trudges into the start of free agency on June 30 knowing that pursing All-Star center Anthony Davis is no longer a possibility after the Pelicans agreed to trade him to the Lakers. The Celtics also could potentially lose two All-Stars this summer with Kyrie Irving and Al Horford having elected to out of their player options for next season.

Madison's Zach Forner hammers a double off the fence (above) in his first at-bat of the game and watches the ball go by while running the bases (left). Madison's Mason Welsh gets caught in a rundown by Carmel's Nick Fishers (below) but later walked and scored in the game. Forner (right, in sunglasses) and Welsh were the only local players among the state's best underclassmen to be invited to play in the showcase. (Staff photos by David Campbell) than I thought I would. It was a good day at the plate and I probably could have stretched that first double into a triple but I thought the right fielder was going to get to it. But I was excited, especially getting to play this way at the home field."

Welsh finished the day at the plate 1-for-2. After striking out in the top of the second inning, he bounced back with a single in the top of the fourth. His last appearance came in the top of the sixth when he drew a walk and scored a batter later on an RBI single by North Decatur's Alex Stirn to tie the game.

Welsh also came up big on the mound with in a scoreless inning of work. Although spending a majority of the afternoon at either second base or shortstop, the junior toed the rubber in the bottom of the fourth and allowed just one hit in the frame while recording four outs. All-Star rules limited each inning to five batters, regardless of outs.

"I just came in today and wanted to play as relaxed as possible," Welsh said. "It's just an all-star game so I wanted to have fun and I did. It was nice to face some fast pitching and have a good day at the plate and you know on the mound I just did my best. I don't throw the fastest so I was a little afraid but it worked out. I just threw and I got the job done."

Armstrong stood by the field and in the press box watching his two players succeed on the diamond, noting that both did an exceptional job of representing themselves and the Madison community.

"It's a great experience for these guys and that's the purpose of a showcase," Armstrong said. "They put their talents out there for the college coaches and I am extremely proud of both of my guys. They hit the ball well and I thought Mason threw well on the mound. I just am really happy they got this experience."

The senior North and South all-stars make their way to town to end the week and kicked off their events with a home run derby at 3 p.m. on Friday afternoon, followed by a banquet at Hanover College that evening. A doubleheader will be played on Saturday afternoon followed by a picnic and festivities downtown and will conclude with a single game on Sunday afternoon.

Miss Madison Regatta Pageant contestants

The 2019 Miss Madison Regatta Pageant will be include 10 young women from Jefferson, Clark and Scott counties in Indiana and Carroll County in Kentucky. The pageant, sponsored by German American Bank, will be Monday, July 1 at North Madison Christian Church as part of this year's APBA Gold Cup and Indiana Governor's Cup Madison Regatta and Roostertail Music Festival. The winner will reign for all Regatta Week events, compete in the Indiana State Festivals Pageant in January and crown the next queen at the 2020 Miss Madison Regatta Pageant.

The 10 contestants are:

Kaylan Renae Anderson, 20, of Madison, the daughter of Jason and Susan Anderson. Anderson is a 2017 graduate of Christian Academy of Madison where she played volleyball. She attends Indiana Wesleyan University where she is majoring in nursing and honors humanities. She attends Calvary Baptist Church and enjoys hand sewing, quilting, knitting and running.

Caitlyn Jade Baker, 18, of Madison, the daughter of Shawn Baker and Jackie Hart. Baker is a 2018 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School where she was a cheerleader, a member of National Honor Society and graduated summa cum laude with honors. She attends Indiana University where she is majoring in elementary education. She is a member of Camp Kesem Animal Club, Gymnastics Club and the Kappa Delta Pi Honor Society. She enjoys spending time with friends, going to the gym, playing with her pets and the outdoors.

Makayla Janan Christian, 18, of Madison, the daughter of Mark and Marilyn Christian. Christian is a 2019 graduate of Shawe Memorial. She will attend Indiana University's Kelley School of Business and major in marketing and Spanish. She was an honors student, academic super bowl and spell bowl participant and valedictorian of her senior class at Shawe. She enjoys baking, sewing, volunteering, photography, painting, singing, crafting, poetry and swimming.

Kennedy Rachelle Easton, 19, of Borden, the daughter of Jeff and Christen Gorden. Easton is a 2018 graduate of Henryville High School where she played golf, was a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Student Advisory Board. She attends Hanover College where she is a member of the golf team, Chi Omega Sorority and is majoring in communications and the Business Scholars Program. She has trained to play guitar, tumbling and golf. Her goal is to become a local news anchor.

Prezley Elizabeth Hartman, 19, of Madison, the daughter of Brett and Julie Mitchell and Keith and Jackie Hartman. Hartman is a 2018 graduate of Southwestern High School where she was student body president, a member of National Honor Society and played volleyball. She attends the University of Alabama where she is majoring in psychology and criminal justice, is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, Phi Eta Sigma Honor Society and will begin work in the university's Autism Research program in the fall with a goal of earning a doctorate in psychology and working in the field of forensic psychology. She works full-time at Lide White Boys & Girls Club, part-time at Mad Paddle Brewery and enjoys playing intramural volleyball in college.

Claudia Wren May, 20, of Madison, the daughter of Joe and Donna May. May is a 2017 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School where she graduated with honors and attends University of Cincinnati where she is a finance and accounting major. She was a member of marching band and played volleyball and softball in high school and intramural volleyball in college. She serves as finance chairholder of the Linder Women in Business Club at UC, volunteers as a social services assistant at the Waters of Clifty Falls Nursing and Rehabilitation Center and works at Red Pepperoni Restaurant. She has interned in finance with Delta Airlines and hopes to attend law school and pursue a career as a stock broker.

Jesse D. Mays, 19, of Austin, the daughter of Joshua and Dawn Mays. Mays is a 2018 graduate of Scottsburg High School where she graduated magna cum laude and was a cheerleader and a member of French Club, Student Council and Pep Club. She attends Indiana University-Southeast where she studies English, pre-law and philosophy and is a member of National Honor Society. She hopes to become a children's advocacy lawyer. She has been youth director at Scaffold Lick Baptist Church for four years, an active member of Kiwanis and a junior member of Scott County United Way Board. She now works with Scott County Community Foundation, is a full-time legal asistant at Houston, Thomas and Lewis, has studied tap and ballet and enjoys reading and spending time with her family.

Climate change talk at library

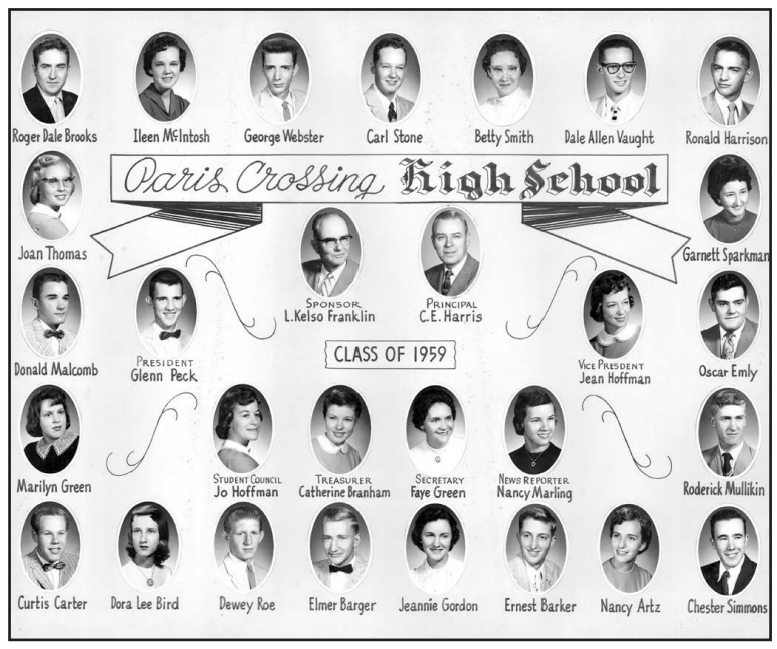
Climate change educator Hans Schmitz will speak Tuesday, June 25, at the Jefferson County Public Library Madison Branch.

One of his roles is to help spread findings from the Indiana Climate Change Impacts Assessment.

His talk, "Variable Weather Patterns, Climate Change and You," will be at 6 p.m. It is sponsored by the Jefferson and Switzerland County Master Gardeners. It is free and open to the public.

Schmitz will talk about the regional effects of climate change, global patterns of climate change and actions people can take to minimize their negative impact on the environment.

Schmitz is the Purdue Extension director and the agriculture and natural resource educator in Posey County, Indiana. He is the co-chairman of the North Central Climate Collaborative, a group of educators from the Great Plains and Midwest focused on climate and climate change education. He also works with the Purdue Climate Change Research Center, which began releasing the assessment a year ago.



Annual Paris Crossing High School Banquet

The 48th Annual Paris Crossing High School Alumni Banquet will begin at 5 p.m. Friday, June 28, at the Pines Evergreen Room in Seymour. Dinner is at 6:30 p.m. and the program will start at 7:30 p.m. Anyone who attended any of the three Jennings County Schools — Paris Crossing, Lovett or Marion — is welcome to attend. The 70-year class of 1949, the 60-year class of 1959, all those in attendance, and the oldest alumni present will be honored. Attendees can donate items, such as collectibles, crafts, antiques and food items, for a silent auction. All proceeds will go to the scholarship fund. Funds designated for the scholarship fund will receive a 50 percent match. Three Paris Crossing Alumni Scholarship recipients for 2019 will be recognized. There will be a memorial service in honor of those alumni who died in the past year. Registration is $25 for alumni and $20 for guests. Registration includes the dues, social hour and dinner. Registration must be mailed to Paris Crossing Alumni, Mary Lou Malcomb Nugent, 5130 N. Kings Way, North Vernon, Indiana 47265. Scholarship donations can be mailed with registration or given at the banquet.

BRIDGE

HEADS YOU WIN, TAILS THEY LOSE

Our friend A.N. Onymous said, "When faced with two choices, simply toss a coin. It works not because it settles the question for you, but because in that brief moment when the coin is in the air, you suddenly know what you are hoping for."

When faced with a two-way finesse, you might flip a coin. But often, either there will be a clue pointing you in the right direction, or the full deal governs what you should do -- as in today's deal.

South is in six spades. After ruffing West's diamond-ace lead, how should he continue?

North responded with the Jacoby Forcing Raise, South's three-diamond rebid showed a singleton or void in that suit, North jumped to game to indicate a minimum, and South bid what he thought he could make.

Declarer might lose one heart and one club. Perhaps the club finesse will win, or maybe South can find the heart queen. But there is an almost-guaranteed line.

South draws trumps ending on the board, ruffs the diamond queen, plays a heart to the king and leads another heart. If East plays the queen, end of problems. If East discards, declarer wins with his ace and leads another heart to endplay West, who must either lead a club into South's ace-queen or concede a ruff-and-sluff, allowing a club to be discarded from the dummy. Finally, if East follows with the last low heart, South plays his jack. Here, the finesse wins, and declarer is playing for an overtrick. But if West produces the heart queen, he is endplayed as just described.

It is heads South wins or tails the defenders lose.

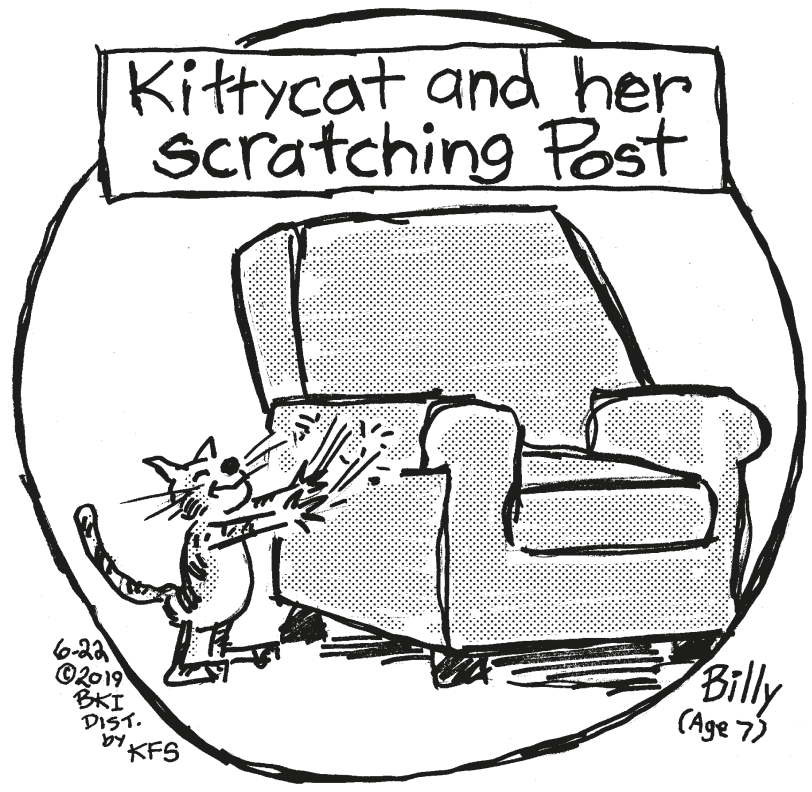
FAMILY CIRCLE

THE FAMILY CIRCUS By Bil Keane



Seven-year-old Billy wraps up his week of family observations.

Bailey Lambert receives honors from Wartburg College

Bailey Lambert of Hanover was named to the Wartburg College dean's list for the Winter and May terms and graduated Magna Cum Laude with a bachelor of arts in Social Work. Bailey Lambert is the daughter of Dr. Lake and Kelly Lambert.

The college recognized 443 students for the Winter and May term and awarded 225 graduates at its commencement in May. The dean's list honors students who earned a cumulative grade point average of 3.5 or above in at least five course credits, four of the five course credits graded as a traditional letter grade.

Wartburg students take four courses during the Winter term, which is January through April, and one course during the one-month May term. Wartburg, in Waverly, Iowa, is a four-year liberal arts college internationally recognized for community engagement and enrolls 1,498 students. Wartburg is affiliated with the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and named after the castle in Germany where Martin Luther took refuge disguised as a knight during the Reformation while translating the Bible from Greek to German.

Folding on this bridge game

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: A few years ago, I joined a duplicate bridge group in town and got paired with an older man who had just broken up with his partner. He taught beginner classes and was a great help in getting me up to speed with modern conventions, as it had been years since I'd played. We did well for the first two years.

Unfortunately, over the past several months, his skill has deteriorated markedly. He makes simple mistakes in both the bidding and play of the hands, and makes them over and over. I've reached a point where I don't enjoy playing with him, and realize I need to break the partnership and find someone else.

The issue is that he is getting on in years (late 80s), and it's almost certain that he has had some mental deterioration, possibly even a TIA. Being blunt with him will be hurtful but I don't know of a better way to do it.

Can you suggest a way to let him down that will keep his dignity? — Unhappy Player

Dear Unhappy Player: First things first, if you've noticed potential symptoms of serious health conditions that this man hasn't noticed yet, you must (gently, privately) bring those matters to his attention, and/or to the attention of his loved ones.

Health disclaimers aside, on to the question of breaking up with him as a bridge buddy: You could sit this man down and tell him that you've enjoyed playing with him but you're looking for another partner. Your time is your own, after all, and it's your right to spend it how you choose. However. I beg you to step back and consider if that's what you really want to do.

Think back to a few years ago, when he first taught you how to play, the ways in which exercised patience and grace in helping you improve. Now you have the opportunity to return that grace at a time when it's really needed. A number of studies, including a 2016 study from the Center for Alzheimer Research and Treatment at Harvard Medical School, have found that social isolation increases the risk and accelerates the progression of cognitive decline.

Instead of ditching your partner altogether, consider finding a less-competitive bridge circle or a less-competitive card game in which you two can participate. Meanwhile, on your own, you can pursue another bridge game that allows you to satiate your appetite for competition. Again, your time is your own, and it's ultimately up to you with whom and how you want to spend it. So I don't present this as an obligation but an opportunity. To quote the illustrious Leonard Nimoy: "The miracle is this: The more we share, the more we have."

Dear Annie: In response to "Seeking Decorum": I have often traveled on airlines with a small dog. If one owner does not ensure that his animal is clean and well-behaved, it should not spoil it for all. It is heart-wrenching to leave an animal behind when out of the country for long periods of time.

Many airlines are prejudiced against animals, and airlines who do allow them should not be discouraged by people who do not like dogs. Also, dogs do not get a free ride. It is very expensive to buy a ticket for an animal to ride underneath the seat ahead. And until better conditions are created, it is often unsafe for animals to ride in the cargo area. — Animal Lover in Quebec

Dear Animal Lover: I agree that traveling in cargo can be unsafe for pets. There have been a number of instances in which pets have tragically died when left on hot tarmacs while in their carriers awaiting loading. I hear and second your plea for more compassion toward those traveling with companion animals.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book – featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette – is available as a paperback and e-book. Visit http://www.creatorspublishing.com for more information.
